Sells More of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Than of All Others Put Together.

Mr. Thomas George, a merchant at Mt. Elgin, Ontario, says: "I have had the local agency for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy ever since it was introduced into Canada, and I sell as much of it as I do of all other lines I have on my shelves put together. Of the many dozens sold under guarantee, I have not had one bottle returned. I can personally recommend this medicine as I have used it myself and given it to my children, and always with the best results." For sale by all dealers.

These War Plays.

Was the "war" just a tradition for a hundred melodramatic conflicts, dish up behind the foot lights, or did it ever occur?

Did you ever ask yourself this question, after having sat through one of those hodge podges that is popularly though elusively called a "war-play"? It makes one rather skeptical, or "juba" minded.

It does seem strange that the war left no other stage-trace than that which you observe at least a half a dozen times during each dramatic season. For these "war plays" are all cut out of the same piece of cloth. Nobody looks upon conflict with any attempt at originality. It must have been a most original war—audaciously and grandiosely original—but on the stage it is dreadfully cheap.

The stage seems to be a sort of mincing machine, that chews up the majesty of everything into sausage meat for the groundlings.

In the "war" the South is, always a pretty girl, who wears hugging muslin skirts, an "early Victorian" bonnet, with her hair done in pendant frankfurters. She says "Ah love you" all through the acts, and she lives in front of her own house—generally on the "stoop." Everything happens to her on the "stoop."

The North is, of course, the dashing Union gentleman, whose mission it is to awaken sympathy in the early Victorian bonnet of the South. To do that he is either wounded right before her eyes, or he saves her home—the stoop, at any rate—from the irreverent manipulation of his colleagues. The South is always a perfect lady, and the North invariably wears masculine uniform.

The "complexions" never vary. Just as she loves him, and is reading her early Victorian bonnet on his well padded coat, she discovers that he has killed some trifle that she loves—a father, or a brother, or a third cousin. Then she says, "Ah love you, but ah can never be yours." She lies, of course, for she will be his, in the last act, and he knows it, and the audience is dead certain of it.

Of course pistol shots are the features of the war-play. The object of the playwright is to make the theater smell as much like a gunpowder factory as he conveniently can. This is local odor—a variation of local color.

The "popular" war-play is a gunpowder racket that adds to the pow-wow between the lovely South and the burly North, but all the time the latter is longing to marry the former. Sometimes you wonder why, for it must be sheer cussedness.

MASS OF SORES

Awful Suffering of Little Boy from an Itching Humour

CURED BY CUTICURA

Not One Square Inch of Skin on His Whole Body Unaffected

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heart-breaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day." ROBERT WATTAM, 4922 Center Ave., Chicago, Ill., Dec. 30, 1897.
